

YALE AND HARVARD BOAT CREWS RESTING ON THEIR OARS READY FOR ANNUAL REGATTA TOMORROW

(By Associated Press.)

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 20.—

The crews of both Yale and Harvard universities are, figuratively speaking, resting on their oars tonight, for on the morrow the rival eights and fours meet in the forty-seventh regatta of two New England colleges. In point of competition these crew races hold precedence over all other forms of dual sports in which the teams of Harvard and Yale are accustomed to match skill and endurance. Stretching back to the autumn of 1852 the history of the inter-varsity shows that with but a few exceptions, during the infancy of the sport, the oarsmen have tested stroke and stamina each year.

In point of antiquity, tradition and eminence these regattas yield to no college contest in American sports in gannals. Antecedent the football, basketball and track meets now a part of the annual athletic curriculum, the boat races are in fact only overshadowed by the historic series between the crews of Oxford and Cambridge which began in 1841. Added interest is also given the regatta tomorrow because of the fact that the winning crew will break the tie of victories now existing as a result of the forty-six races that have already become a part of the boating history of Harvard and Yale.

Since the first race was rowed on Lake Winnepesaukee on August 3, 1852, the oarsmen of Yale and Harvard have matched speed and strength forty-six times, and the total number of wins for each university is twenty-three, showing how evenly matched the two universities have proved during this period of sixty-one years. Victories, however, have not been so evenly apportioned in the matter of years for both Harvard and Yale have won and lost races in groups of three or more as a rule.

Harvard, opening with a victory in the initial contest, appeared to enjoy the experience, for during the first twenty-three races Harvard won fifteen to Yale's eight. The Elis turned the tide in 1886, and from that year until 1908 the regatta on the Thames, so far as the varsity eight oared crews were concerned, saw the blue-tipped oars finishing first in every year except in 1891, 1899 and 1900. Then the pendulum swung to the Crimson again and for the past five years Harvard has led the way across the finish line.

As a result of this string of defeats Yale rowing authorities decided that a new system was needed. It was determined to go back to England for stroke and coaches, and begin all over again. Consequently on the eve of the regatta Yale is found with an English shell, an English stroke, and two advisory English coaches in the persons of J. R. Kirby and Harcourt Gold, both well known Oxford university oarsmen. The Eli under graduates and alumni are hoping that the change in system will develop a winner tomorrow for the blue. But above victory they place faith in the methods now in vogue, and believe that by going back to the fountain head of rowing a successful coaching system will be evolved in the near future, if not in 1913.

It will be seen therefore, that the two university crews came to New London this year after training seasons of radically different character. Jim Wray, the Crimson coach, who has turned out five winning crews, remains in charge of the Harvard boat, but the varsity eight has still to win its first race this year, having been defeated by both Princeton and Cornell over short courses last month. Yale has not been tested in an intercollegiate contest this season. The rowing activities at New Haven have been devoted chiefly to learning the so-called English stroke. Whether the resultant greater backward swing and long recovery in the Yale shell will bring to the blue her first victory in six years has been a subject for animated discussion among oarsmen, both amateur and professional. Since the season's training began there have been many shifts of both crews. Although the changes in the crimson's boat were the more numerous and radical, Harvard will have more veteran oarsmen than Yale in tomorrow's contest.

Because of the sluggish tide, the Thames course is slow as compared with the intercollegiate course at Poughkeepsie. The time of twenty minutes, ten seconds, made by Yale in 1888, still stands as the Thames record, while the record for four miles lane on the Hudson river is eighteen minutes, fifty-three and one-fifth seconds, made by Cornell in 1901.

As a marine picture, the Harvard and Yale regatta on the lower reaches of the Thames probably surpasses anything of its kind in this country. Because of the proximity of the Thames course to Long Island Sound, hundreds of steam, motor and sailing yachts are able to obtain good observation anchorages near the finish line, where for a day or two they are affluited with crimson and blue banners and with signal flags. Large crimson steamers thronged with spectators crowd in behind the steam yachts; and observation trains on either bank keep other thousands abreast of the contest.

THE MANUFACTURER AND HIS TRADE-MARK

Behind every trade-mark that really amounts to anything there are brains, energy, ambition and work—hard work—joined hand in hand to produce some article of worth that will deserve and win universal approval.

After a manufacturer has spent a great many years in organizing his business and perfecting his product his name and his trade-mark amount to something worth while, or else he has toiled in vain. The name or trade-mark alone of many a big concern is worth thousands and hundreds of dollars. It is often called good will. It might be called reputation.

The trade-mark is the directing finger, pointing the way to articles of quality and dependability.

Manufacturers of trade-marked articles are no longer satisfied to advertise their trade-mark only. They are coming to understand that they must also advertise the place where their goods may be purchased. That is why you see trade-marked articles advertised more and more in daily newspapers, because the newspaper is the chief advertising medium for creating actual demand upon the retailer.

FRANK PITTMAN DESERTS RANKS OF BACHELORS

S. QUIETLY MARRIED AT VICKSBURG, MISS., TO CHILDHOOD SWEETHEART.

Frank Pittman, the Tonopah attorney, brother of United States Senator Key Pittman, has deserted the bachelor circle in which he has long been an honored member, and on his return to Tonopah shortly will be registered among the ranks of the bachelors. Pittman and Mrs. Julia Heim were quietly married at Vicksburg, Miss., Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock, according to a telegram received yesterday by Vail Pittman. The couple left immediately for Kansas City and are now enjoying their honeymoon. The return to Tonopah will be by easy stages as all points of interest will be visited enroute.

The wedding is the culmination of a childhood romance. Pittman was born at Vicksburg, as were his brothers and also the bride. Later the family home was moved to Louisiana and the courtship of the two was conducted by mail. In later years Pittman emigrated west and for the past six years has lived in Tonopah. Some time ago on his return to his former home he again met the sweetheart of his youth, who had married and been widowed by death. The courtship was resumed, and three weeks ago when Pittman left for Louisiana, ostensibly for a month's vacation, the real reason was to claim his bride. He kept his mission secret and the first news of the wedding was the receipt of the telegram by his brother.

Mr. and Mrs. Pittman are expected to arrive in Tonopah in about a week or ten days.
